

Amanda Belcher is an educator and community advocate. She has been a Social Studies Teacher at Elyria High School since 2007 and an adjunct faculty member at Lorain County Community College since the spring of 2012. She has a Master's Degree of Arts in Sociology from Cleveland State University where she completed her thesis titled Effects of No Child Left Behind on an Urban School District: A Case Study of the Elyria City School District. She has also earned a Bachelor's Degree of Science in Education in Integrated Social Studies from Bowling Green State University. She holds a Professional License from the State of Ohio Department of Education in Adolescence to Young Adult Integrated Social Studies. She remains very active in her community having tutored at Lorain County Children's Services and working as a teen liaison with the after school program Elyria Teens Achieve Success partnering with Save Our Children and the Boys and Girls Club. She currently serves on the board as secretary of Leaders of Today, a local leadership development organization for teens. She has volunteered for many school levy campaigns and served as the advisor of various extracurricular organizations at Elyria High School. She has completed a multitude of Professional Development courses and has led team-building exercises with the staff of Elyria High School. She currently serves on the Equity Task Force of the Elyria City School District and is planning and facilitating the Equity Initiative of the district. Her areas of interest include, equity, education, and social justice.