

Izzy Stewart (she/her) is an Elyria High School alumni and graduated from Kent State University with a Bachelor's degree in Public Relations in 2022. Throughout her time in college, Izzy focused heavily on voter registration and mobilizing her generation to become involved in local elections. This led her to working at EMILY's List in Washington, D.C., throughout the 2022 midterm elections where she wrote donor communications to gravitate support for women running for office across the country. Izzy is currently a Communications Manager at Planned Parenthood of Greater Ohio where she manages the execution of a strategic communications plan, builds campaigns, and crafts persuasive messaging around reproductive health care and sexual health education. She is devoted to using storytelling and other resources to uplift the voices of others and fight for a more equitable today and future. Izzy serves as the Communications Coordinator for Leaders of Today, a leadership development organization for Lorain County high school students.
